Diary of Chief Plague Officer, Bangalore City, dated 19th February 1899.

Left 7 A. M. Devanhalli for the hill at the foot. I met the Amildar of Chikballapur who had kindly come to arrange for my transport up the hill.

The Plague Inspector of Devanhalli accompanied me up to Kodgurke, which village I inspected. It was completely evacuated, up to date 6 cases have occurred here. The villagers seem to understand the advantages of evacuation more than the townspeople; and no sooner a case or two occur in a village the inhabitants take to their fields where they put up their huts at their own cost Hindus and Mahomedans alike. The latter have no Maccai to preach to them or quote the text from the Koran, at Devanhalli the Mahomedans were at first rather slow to evacuate chiefly due to the threat held out by the Barra Emam that if they left the town he would not go to their houses for any religious ceremony but subsequently a case or two occurred in his own family, and he had to evacuate, and the rest of the community chose to do as he did rather than what he preached.

Arrived at the bungalow at about 11 A. M.

Extract from the Diary of the Plague Officer, Kolar, for the week ending Friday, 24th February 1899.

* * * Thursday, 23rd February 1899. Left Kolar for Malur. Inspected Wakleri en route, found the streets swept and the villagers with the shekdar and patel at their head very busy cleaning up and removing all filth and manure from their backyards; went out to Lakkur in the afternoon. The village, consisting of 302 houses, and a population of 2,180 souls, has been wholly evacuated, the people living out in the surrounding fields in jopadis.

There have been altogether 6 attacks and 5 deaths from the 23rd January (the date of the first attack) up to date.

The first indication the people had of the village being infected was the finding on the 17th January of some dead rats in the house of a Banajigar named Ramiah. The next day (18th January) about half of the village was evacuated, and by the 22nd the whole village community had turned out. On the 23rd January a Banajigar woman named Hanumakka, who lived a few houses off that of Ramiah, developed plague and died the next day. On proceeding to disinfect her house in the village, the Amildar found several dead rats in it. There is therefore no doubt that she carried the infection with her into the open. On the 2nd February, Ramanjiah, the brother of Ramiah above named, died of plague. The last attack, that of a Madiga woman named Mooni, occurred on the 17th. She appears to be improving. The promptitude with which the village was evacuated is very commendable. The people looked healthy and appeared very cheerful. Returned to Malur at 7 P. M.

At Malur, inspected the town in which the first step towards disinfecting the houses is being taken, viz., unroofing them to let in sunshine and air. There have not been any attacks or deaths during the past 10 days or fortnight.

Chintamani and Kolar also send in clean bills for the past week.
